“ I am so blessed to have known Sis Carolyn. Most of my memories of her is from praying together. She prayed with such authority and anointing because she knew that Jesus gave the right to His children to ask what they will. She prayed because she knew it made a difference not just in her own life but in the lives of those she loved. She prayed for me and my family often and I did the same for her and hers. She is the kind of person who deserves to be honored and remembered. She was a real life hero. However, she never would have said or thought so. She would have just wanted people to see Jesus in the love that she poured out. You can not give what you do not have. Sister Carolyn as I called her was able to give so much because she was so full of Gods Word and mercy. She was strong until the end continuing to serve her family and taking care of some of her great grand kids. She so completely deserves to be reunited with her husband and loved ones who have gone before and to finally meet Jesus face to face whom she loved so much. It hurts to say good bye because the world needs more people like her in it. However it makes my spirit so proud to watch her soar like the angels and to know that the voice I heard worshiping Jesus in prayer will not be silenced but will forever ring out through the ages.
