“ I, too, served with John on the JFK but we were more than just shipmates or coworkers. We quickly became brothers, compadres, co-conspirators and fast friends. In the time we spent together it was rare to find one of us without the other. We shared many adventures together including many trips to WEST BY GOD VIRGINIA (his words) either on my motorcycle or in his car where his Mom and Dad became my surrogate parents. I even went to visit them a couple of times after my "release" from the Navy. Sadly, when we left the Navy our lives went in different directions and we lost touch with each other. I often wondered what had become of him and after the internet evolved I tried passively searching for him but found nothing. After many years we were once again reacquainted when he contacted another buddy, Carroll Bland, who is also from W.Va. and he in turn told Dick StPierre who I have been in touch with since the early 1980s. Dick contacted me with John's phone number and I immediately called him. That conversation melted away all of the time we had been apart and it was as if we had always been together. He was the same guy that I had spent so much time with although older, wiser and greyer. We arranged a reunion at John's for the 4 of us and got together in October of 2019. It was a great time and we talked endlessly, or at least I did. John said I was the same as he remembered. I would just "jabber on".

That was the last chance I had to go see John even though I had made partial plans a couple of times that didn't materialize but we had quite a few phone conversations since but I will always remember the spark or gleam he had in his eyes when he was excited or up to some mischief. It was still there after all the years we were apart.

You are free from your pain now, John, after fighting a good fight, making it past the doctor's expectations. I will always remember you and will look forward to the day that we will once again be reunited. Until then, dear brother, Rest in Peace. I love you.

“ John and I served together on the USS John F. Kennedy many years ago. It would be hard to imagine two more different people but we became fast friends and shared many adventures on the high seas. I recently was able to reconnect with John and found that we were still very much unchanged. I hear his laugh when I think of him. I wish peace and comfort for Pam and the family.

John and I were shipmates aboard the USS John F. Kennedy. We were in A-Division and worked hand in hand over the years. We shared good, bad and indifference, but through it all we were always friends. When we went on liberty, we we equals in every way, and enjoyed some of the best times together. He was always so chipper and easy to get along with. He always saw the best in everything, and helped others to see it as well. We were able to get back together for a Navy reunion back in 2019, and I was able to see his wonderful old self once again. I will always miss my good friend and shipmate, John Lewis!
